2 Samuel 7:1-14a Let God be God

Now settled in his new capital, Jerusalem, David resolves to make a temple as a permanent dwelling place for God who has been on the move alongside his people since they left Egypt, and with David since he chose him to be Israel's king. But God has other ideas: this is not the time for the building of a temple, a task that will fall to David's successor, Solomon. Nonetheless, God makes an everlasting covenant with David that secures his royal dynasty.

First impressions

How would you feel about staying in a place like this?

What about living here permanently? What would be the pluses? And the minuses?

What kind of house do you think would be fitting for God?

A prayer for all ages together

God of the past and the future, of our present questions and our future hopes: help us to rest in your call to us, in whichever season we find ourselves; and help us to trust that you will provide for us in the future, as you have in the past. Amen.

ANOTHER PRAYER

What is next? Ask this question to God and then spend some time drawing or doodling what comes to mind. Let God speak through your pencil and don't over think it, let God be God. Afterwards, pray about what you've created.
